PROFILE

Compared to the average life expectancy of a rock star, the JACKBOX guys may seem a bit long in the tooth, and yet they are still capable of delivering a great, energetic show that is bound to make many young rock newbies green with envy.

JACKBOX's music style is clearly rooted in the hard rock and the heavy metal characteristic of the 80's, but they successfully manage to defy a clear labeling and cannot be easily put in any typical music pigeonhole. Still, even though none of band members would deny this close relationship with the 80's, JACKBOX sounds just like JACKBOX, with a clearly developed, unique sound of their own.

In a nutshell,
JACKBOX has the songs that were forgotten to be written in the 80's.

Currently the band is working hard on completing their latest albums coming out this year:
TV (A Rock Opera) The Soundtrack and TV (A Rock Opera) The Musical
